VOLUME LXNI.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 18, 1865

NUMBER 143

PUBLISHED (DAILY) BY
EDGAR SNOWDEN, SR.
OFFICE—No. 104, King street, over
French's Book Store.

The Washington Correspondent of the New York News says:—"The suppression of the Richmond Whig, is an example of what the Administration has power to do, either in the South, or in the North. The minute and systematic arrangement of the five grand Military Divisions, and the eighteen Military Departments, into which the whole territory of the United States is now divided, is simply an indication of the purpose of the Administration to make its power felt, acknowledged, and respected, in all parts of the country alike. I am satisfied that if the objectionable article in the Richmond Whig, or an article couched in similar language, had appeared in any New York or Philadelphia paper, either the paper itself would have been suppressed, or the principal editor arrested and confined in Fort Lafayette, beyond the reach of the habeas corpus.

"The policy which the Administration has determined to pursue toward the South is now being developed. It was with a well-defined purpose that President Johnson made the $20,000 exemption. When Judge Underwood of Virginia was here a few days ago, he did not succeed in getting an order for the arrest of Gen. Lee, and that distinguished officer is to be left unmolested, at least until he has finished writing the history of his campaigns.

"Judge Underwood, however, did succeed in obtaining orders for the enforcement of the Confiscation act in Virginia, and the work of enforcing its provisions will be carried out all over that State, in the same manner that it has been commenced in Richmond. Nor is that all. Virginia is not to be treated any worse, in this respect, than any other Southern State. The plain talk of the President to the delegation that recently begged him to remove the $20,000 exemption was intended for the ears of the whole South. The Confiscation act will be enforced, if for no other reason than to reach and punish those men in the South who are held accountable by the Administration for having furnished the means of keeping the rebellion alive so long. I leave the duty of commenting upon this fact to others. Mine is discharged when I have simply stated it.

"From gentlemen who have just arrived here from the southern part of Virginia and from South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, I have derived some interesting facts in regard to the feelings and sentiments of the people of those States toward the Government. The Southern people feel themselves to be conquered and subjugated. They submit to what they are powerless to resist. They acquiesce in the present order of things, because they have no alternative. The alleged conduct of several military officers and provost marshals in command at the South, in deciding differences between white people and negroes, and in refusing to punish the latter for crimes are urged to show that the Government has determined to force absolute negro equality, both political and social, upon the South, and that at no distant day.

"I believe this is an erroneous opinion. It could easily be removed. The Southern people look to President Johnson with the most intense anxiety. It is in his power to win to the support of his Administration the entire population of the South. He may rule over them if he will, by love, not by bayonets. Let me implore him to do so. Let me implore him to respect the feelings of a brave and magnanimous people. They acquiesce, cheerfully, in the extirpation of slavery, and in the paramount authority of the national Government. Do not drive them to desperation. They cannot resist. They must submit to whatever the Administration adopt. Surely, it is far better to make them willing subjects, than to hold them in subjection with large armies, like conquered vassals.

From Port au Prince.

The bark Springbok brings Port au Prince advices to June 28.

The political affairs in the north are still unsettled. The rebels continued to hold Cape Haytien, and the Government forces were making slow work in reducing that town. The place had been declared in a state of siege, and all foreign consuls had been notified of that fact, but it was considered difficult work on the part of the Government to make it effective, owing to the want of suitable vessels. The rebels were confined to Cape Haytien, the east of the island being in a tranquil state.
